Abstract: Recently, AI technologies have been applied to legal domain such as IBM watson program and machine learning. In this talk, we firstly overview existing AI technologies applied to legal domain and we argue drawbacks of these approaches. Then, we present a legal reasoning system PROLEG which would be regarded as an explanation generator of judgement. We also discuss about how to connect natural language sentences written as judgement with PROLEG logical formulae.